Important Information

Important information - your puppy should look very healthy and a little fat especially following their meal. Throughout their years always check with your veterinarian regarding his or her weight. A male will in most cases appear much larger than a female; this is good and not a sign of over feeding. A male may require a small amount more food during feeding, but only if he does not look chubby and looks for more food; in this case increase his kibble by a 1/2 cup only if 6 months or older. Also as they get up in years you might find the need to cut back their food amount, but always consult your veterinarian. There are times when your puppy will reach 5 months and need to go to twice a day feeding and not three times a day; this is okay, but increase to the six-month-old plan and always check with your veterinarian. Always give your dog plenty of water, but do not allow them to drink a lot of water before feedings. After feeding they can drink as much as they need; they will feel full and stop. A dog will most likely finish their food, so if you give them water before feeding, they may have too much in their belly and most likely vomit due to stomach pressure.
